PENITENTIAL RITE

For centuries the Roman Mass, as generally celebrated, had no penitential rite. It was only after the Roman liturgy spread into Gallo-Frankish lands that the first elements of such appear. The Confiteor appeared among the prayers said by the priest and ministers at the foot of the altar and was also said by a minister prior to the distribution of the Eucharist. In both instances these were private rather than public prayers.

Much discussion took place among the artisans of the Order of Mass. Should a penitential rite be included since the Eucharist itself is a sacrament of reconciliation? And if so, should such a rite be used at all times? What would be the most appropriate location for a penitential rite?

After much deliberation it was decided to place a simple penitential rite at the beginning of the celebration. In a way this decision reflects both scripture and tradition. In Matthew 5:23-25 Christ calls for reconciliation with others before offering sacrifice. Moreover, an ancient document known as the Didache states that on the Lord's Day people are to come together to break bread and to give thanks "after first confessing their sins" so that the sacrifice will be pure.

The rite has a four-part structure. After an invitation requesting the community to recall its sinfulness, there is a period of silent reflection. A common proclamation that all are sinners before God follows. This may be a shorter and more simplified form of the traditional Confiteor or one of two sets of invocations addressed to Christ and incorporated in the Kyrie. The priest concludes with a prayer requesting forgiveness.

In the penitential rite the whole assembly, proclaiming itself sinful before God, manifests that it is a community ever converting, ever in need of reconciliation with God and others.

All the parish tickets were sold and school families and staff made a substantial contribution. We are grateful to all of you.

The raffle was drawn at the parish dinner on 8 June, with most of the winners in attendance to accept their prizes. The lucky winners were:

1st Mystery Flight	- D McNamara (ticket 2291)

3rd Patchwork Quilt	- Pauline Moloney (ticket 2556)
